1100: The Thomas Jefferson Hour: Thomas Jefferson is interpreted by Clay S. Jenkinson. This week, we answer listener questions on the Thomas Jefferson Hour, including a letter from a writer who wonders whether the Founding Fathers were geniuses who seized the moment, or simply average people living in extraordinary times. We also speak with our good friend Beau Wright. Archive 06-18-2018 Podcaster's website ; Underwriter website

1200: MyND Talk: After seven years of faithfully following her spiritual teacher, Renee Linnell finally realized she was in a cult and had been severely brainwashed. But how did that happen to someone like her? She had graduated magna cum laude with a double degree. She had traveled to nearly fifty countries alone before she turned thirty-five. She was a surf model and a professional Argentine tango dancer. She had started five different companies and had an MBA from NYU. How could someone like her end up brainwashed and in a cult? 1400: Conversation Earth: No civilization should head out into the world without Doughnut Economics in its survival kit. With her modernized thinking, economist Kate Raworth is, in her words, flipping economics on its head. UK Guardian columnist George Monbiot calls her new book, Doughnut Economics: Seven Ways to Think Like a 21st-Century Economist, brilliant, thrilling and revolutionary. In this first of a two-part conversation, Raworth explains why its way past time to update the approach to economics thats been taught for over a century. She outlines seven fundamentals to achieving a healthy 21st century economy. Kate advocates painting a new mural over the intellectual graffiti keeping us locked into outdated economic thinking. Kate Raworth is a Senior Visiting Research Associate at Oxford Universitys Environmental Change Institute, and Senior Associate at the Cambridge Institute for Sustainability Leadership. From 2002 to 2013 she was Senior Researcher at Oxfam, before which she worked for the United Nations Development Programme where she co-authored the UN Human Development Report from 1997-2001. Shes presented her ideas about Doughnut Economics to audiences ranging from the United Nations General Assembly to the Occupy movement. 1430: Conversation Earth: Human civilization can thrive while living within sensible limits imposed by a finite system. Renegade economist Kate Raworth manages to tell the truth about what were getting wrong in economics, while at the same time inspiring activism and optimism. In this conclusion of a two-part interview, Kate finishes her list of seven fundamentals to achieving a healthy 21st century economy. Her recently published book, Doughnut Economics: Seven Ways to Think Like a 21st-Century Economist, was called brilliant, thrilling and revolutionary by columnist George Monbiot. This conversation includes some of Raworths ideas about how we can put into practice what she is preaching. Kate Raworth is a Senior Visiting Research Associate at Oxford Universitys Environmental Change Institute, and Senior Associate at the Cambridge Institute for Sustainability Leadership. From 2002 to 2013 she was Senior Researcher at Oxfam, before which she worked for the United Nations Development Programme where she co-authored the UN Human Development Report from 1997-2001. 1900: Peace Talks Radio: The Series on Peacemaking and Nonviolent Conflict Resolution: The Peace Work of John Lennon and Yoko Ono: On this special edition of Peace Talks Radio, we recall the several years when musician John Lennon and his wife, performance artist Yoko Ono, were among the most high profile peace advocates on the planet. John was shot dead outside his apartment in New York in 1980 " 11 years after he wrote the song that " since its creation in 1969, has been a fixture at just about any gathering for peace. We'll talk with Yoko Ono as well as the producers and directors of two fine films about this part of their lives: David Leaf who co-created the film The US vs. John Lennon , and the co-producers of the film John and Yoko, Give Peace A Song , Paul McGrath and Alan Lysaght. Lennon's voice is heard in clips from both films and in his songs including, Give Peace A Chance, Happy Xmas (War Is Over), Power To The People, Revolution, and Imagine.
